

European Value Networks Summit

San Francisco, Calif. USA (PRWEB) March 27, 2006 -- Colabria®, the leading worldwide action/research network of the knowledge economy and Cisco Systems®, announce the European Value Networks Summit and broad industry sponsorship for value networks (VN) and value network analysis (VNA).

Value networks and value networks analysis are superior methods for understanding, visualizing and leading knowledge-based and network-centric organizations.

This broad industry cooperative partnership will be launched at the European Value Networks Summit, on April 25-26, at Utrecht, Netherlands.

Value networks are redefining operations and strategies in the smartest organizations. They provide the roadmap to their network-centric future. Value networks lead mastery of knowledge-based organizations and the knowledge economy.

Value networks are popular in diverse institutional settings such as the European Commission, Geneva-based NGOs, the Red Cross and global health organizations.

Value networks and value network analysis are becoming commonplace in top global firms. Value networks drive improvements in resource utilization, productivity, innovation and sharply improved performance overall. Some top enterprise users of value networks are Cisco Systems, Boeing, HP, Chevron, Pac Bell, AT&T, Sun, Eli Lilly, Microsoft, Abbott Laboratories, Intel and Siemens.

This event is sponsored by action/research participants. Value networks fundamentally expand and redefine the scope and importance of networks. Cisco Systems is an enterprise sponsor.

The action/research sessions are low-cost, practical and conversational. They are for executives, directors and practitioners having immediate needs for improved performance, greater effectiveness, faster innovation, customer delight and mastery of network-centric business.
